Millions of Americans participate in health plans provided by large employers. In April 2000, Rep. Waxman released a report by the Special Investigations Division that evaluates whether these major employers have medical privacy policies that comply with the recommendations of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and other privacy experts. The report found that many companies have failed to implement sound privacy policies. Documents and Links

- Report without exhibits (19 pages)
- Report with exhibits (104 pages)