

A draft Committee report circulated by Chairman Waxman finds that in the months before the 2006 elections, the White House Office of Political Affairs “enlisted agency heads across government in a coordinated effort to elect Republican candidates to Congress,” directing them “to make hundreds of trips – most at taxpayer expense – for the purpose of increasing the electability of Republicans.”

Documents and Links

- Draft Report: The Activities of the White House Office of Political Affairs
- Appendix A: White House Memoranda
- Appendix B: Events Spreadsheet
- Supporting Documents
- Interview of Ken Mehlman
- Deposition of Matthew Schlapp
- Interview of Mindy McLaughlin
- Deposition of Sara Taylor
- Interview of Scott Jennings