

The Clinton Administration was subjected to extensive congressional oversight. The Clinton Administration produced well over 1.2 million pages of document to the House Government Reform Committee alone. The Administration may not have always acted properly, but the Republican approach--regardless of the facts--was always "accuse first, investigate later." Further investigation often showed the allegations to be unsubstantiated. Documents and

Links

- Unsubstantiated Allegations of Wrongdoing Involving the Clinton Administration
- Congressional Oversight of the Clinton Administration